Dear Dr. Gianutsos,

Congratulations! You have been ranked one of the top doctors in the Seattle area for Seattle Met magazine's Top Doctors 2011 issue.

Seattle Met teamed with professional ratings company Avvo to select the top 5 percent of practitioners in 66 specialties. Learn more about how Avvo ranks doctors at <http://www.avvo.com/support/avvo-rating-doctors>.

This year, a record number of doctors—almost 4,000—provided information to Avvo, including education, training, special honors or positions held, and peer endorsements. We couldn't have done it without you and your dedicated support staff.

The results appear in the August 2011 issue, alongside in-depth coverage of health and medical issues written in the award-winning style that appears every month in Seattle Met. The issue is always a best seller on newsstands and one of the most popular features all year long at seattlemet.com where readers search for doctors as their medical needs arise.

Enclosed you'll find a certificate inscribed with your name and specialty, suitable for display in your waiting room, office, or hospital. We hope you'll be proud to let your patients know that you have been singled out by the most discriminating publication in Seattle, knowing that it will reflect well on your practice and your hospital—and, of course, give confidence to patients who turn to you for medical advice.

Best regards,

Katherine Koberg
